Art Faculty Biennial Exhibition

By ADRIANA MCELWAIN / CASA

FROM TOWERING, life size paintings to small delicate works on paper, the talented and diverse faculty of Santa Barbara City College will open an exhibition featuring works of varying scale, media, and style this week.

"This is a wonderful way to start the school year," shared Dane Goodman, Gallery Director. "Students get to see their instructor's work before taking their classes."

Marking the beginning of a new school year, the exhibition, Art Faculty Biennial opens August 27th, with a reception from 5 to 7pm featuring works in mixed media, painting, drawing, sculpture, collage, ceramics, digital art, and print making.

The art faculty at Santa Barbara City College is highly regarded and have all exhibited their work nationally, according to Goodman. The Santa Barbara Museum of Art holds the work of faculty members Marie Schoeff and Rafael Perea de la Cabada in their permanent collection. "The art department has been exhibiting their work since the mid 70's," Goodman explained. "The community is well aware of these artists and have seen their work in numerous local exhibitions."

Working in large format text based painting, Beverly Decker's work involves abstract calligraphy that is hand written in four directions creating overlapping layers that appear as a visual meditation. The text is inspired by a Buddhist practice that expresses the thought of love, joy, compassion and peace for all.

Marie Schoeff practices an interesting form of print making called trace drawing. This technique involves placing a piece of paper on top of an inky plate. Using a pen, stick or any other stylus, the image is drawn on the back of the paper. The pressure of the drawing tool picks up a line of ink on the paper as the pen bears down. When the paper is peeled off the plate, the lines appear on the paper.

Stephanie Dotson has been a member of the print making faculty for two years. She teaches wood cut printing and silk screening. Her work is often multi layered and combines drawing, painting, print making, digital design, and paper cutouts. She assembles her works with a variety of surfaces ranging from paper to fabric to wood.

"It's great to see such a range in approaches to making art," Goodman shared.

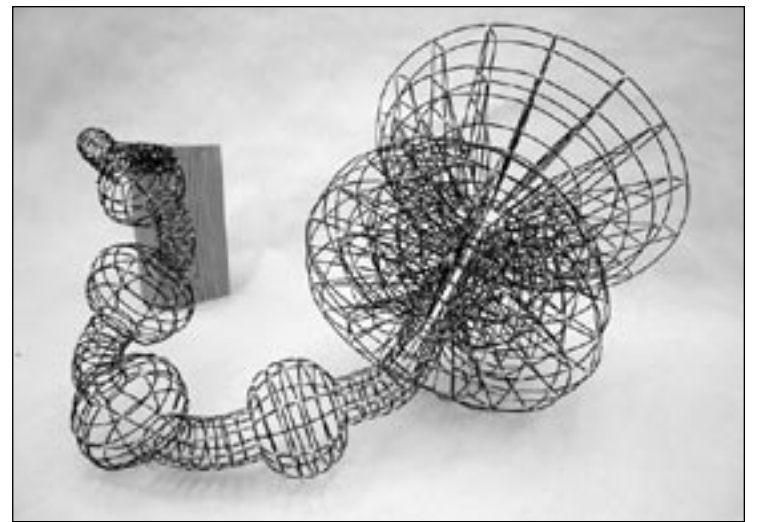

Two members of the Art History Department, Thomas Larson and Barbara Vilander, will also have work on exhibit. Thomas Larson will give a public lecture in the Humanities Building on September 15th.

Exhibiting faculty members include Christopher Bates, Linda Benet, Beverly Decker, Tom Decker, Stephanie Dotson, William Durham, Ed Inks, Thomas Larson, Rafael Perea de la Cabada, Michelle Onstot, Marie Schoeff, Libby Smith, Barbara Vilander, and Nina Warner.

Atkinson Gallery is located in the Humanities Building on the East Campus at Santa Barbara City College. Open Mon-Thurs 10-8pm and Fri-Sat 10-5pm. You can reach the gallery at 965-0581 x3484.
